TODAY'S PEACE POLICY

MITIGATES FUTURE CAUSES OF FLIGHT

Arms exports to countries with dubious regimes damage the credibility of Germany's and Europe's foreign and development policy. Instead of arming other countries so that they can upgrade up migration controls, dialogue, diplomacy and prevention must be at the heart of an active peace policy, and parties to conflicts must be brought to the negotiating table early on. An active peace policy includes strengthening rule of law, democracy and division of powers.
