EUROPE 2025

Young people shaping Europe

Euro-crisis, Brexit, the threat of terrorism, border closures – the headlines surrounding the European Union are disturbing. Many people believe that there is a need for change. But how should a renewed EU look like? To find an answer to this important question, we will meet at an historic sight – the birthplace of German democracy, the Hambach castle – to exchange ideas between students and European parliamentarians from Germany, France and Poland.

The current and probably most challenging crisis the EU has faced to date, has already triggered a long overdue debate on the EU's outlook for the future. During the workshop "Europe 2025", the participants will take a closer look at that process in particular, in order to develop their own vision. The main themes will be: In which policy areas should the EU member states intensify closer cooperation and in which not? Will the idea of closer ties between a core of member states help sustain a social Europe? How should member states handle the anti-EU sentiment in their public discourse?

After the workshop, the students will be discussing their perspectives with members of the European parliament.
